About the Masterclass

Fall 2022 Iteration: November 1 – December 2

Final Submission “Deadline”: December 15

Learning Technology & Innovation is proud to present our self-directed “introductory masterclass” on podcasting. The class lasts four weeks and can be completed at your own pace; if you choose pace yourself along with us, you will complete the course in a month and have access to four live on-line sessions to practice skills and ask questions.

By the end of this course, learners will:

- Have a clear sense of whether podcasting is the right medium for their project.
- Understand the different ways podcasting can be used for mobilizing scholarly knowledge.
- Have exposure to basic experiences of recording and editing audio.
- Have exposure to basic experiences using WordPress for podcast distribution.
- Have a scope for development of their own scholarly podcast.

The thematic focus of the course is scholarly podcasting, but there is space here for everyone and the skills are broadly transferable to any podcasting project.

Join Us!

This site can be used by anyone – at TRU, or beyond! – and you don’t have to formally sign up to follow along. But if you’d like to be added to the site in order to do the weekly mini-assignments, or if you’d like to come to the live sessions and join the Mattermost channel for just-in-time support, please fill in the form below.

ABOUT

A Day in the Life of a Podcast

A question we get asked a lot is, “How long does it take to make a podcast?” This is very much a how-long-is-a-piece-of-string question, but using an episode of LT&I’s in-house podcast, You Got This!, we’ve tried to break down the timelines.

You can click here to hear the final cut of the episode (<https://yougotthis.trubox.ca/podcast/episode-3-lets-make-you-feel-comfortable-ft-lindsay-blackstock/>). It runs 37 minutes in length.

Pre-Recording Setup (approx. 30 minutes):

- Book guests, which usually requires some flexibility and rescheduling.
- Set up the recording space, both digital (we use Zencastr (<https://zencastr.com/>)) and physical (lock the cats out of your office, etc).
- Confirm mic and headphones are working. Yes, you should do this every single time you record. Ask us how we know.

Recording (approx. 90 minutes):

- Record the interview, which usually takes about one hour.
- Record the introductory essay, which usually takes about thirty minutes to nail down (it was a little longer this week because Brenna had to re-do it in a quieter location).

Production (approx. 90 minutes):

- This will vary widely depending on what you are trying to accomplish. For You Got This!, we use a very light editorial hand — we trim out excessively long pauses or a lot of ums and ahs, but we want people to sound like themselves, also.
- As an established podcast, You Got This! already has music and other production elements in place. For your first few episodes, building these components parts will take additional time.
- Interviews and essay-style podcasts will require less production time, while documentary-style podcasts will require substantially more (most documentary podcasts are not made and released on a week-to-week schedule).

Transcription (approx. 60 minutes, + processing time):

- At You Got This!, we firmly believe that podcasts made to disseminate scholarly communication or support community must be day-one accessible, and as such we encourage you to build a transcription plan into your podcast. You’ll learn about lots of options in this course.

- We prefer to create our transcripts ourselves, using the automatic transcription function that comes with Zencast Pro. Some weeks, when Brenna gets really in over her head – like this one – we send You Got This! episodes to Rev for automatic transcription, because the quality of grammar is better and requires less editing. This can take anywhere from a few minutes to a few hours to process, so plan ahead whichever option you choose. Using a gig-labour-driven tool like Rev is not an ethically neutral choice (<https://www.theverge.com/2019/11/25/20979249/rev-recordings-transcriptions-low-pay-complaints-freelance-transcribers>), and we work to minimize our reliance on this service, even the automated option.
- Editing the automated transcript usually takes about 1-2 hours of focused time, depending on the episode length. This week it took an hour.

Posting (approx. 30 minutes)

- These tasks are small: assemble show notes, choose a featured image, upload the audio file and fill in the metadata.
- We try to do this in advance so the post is scheduled and we can come back and make adjustments as needed.

So for this 37 minute episode, it takes about 3.5 hours of labour. Hopefully, this gives you a sense of how to plan for your own podcast schedule.

Questions You Might Have

Frequently-ish Asked Questions

What is a Podcast?

As the term “podcast” gets increasingly buzzy, it seems to be increasingly used to refer to all kinds of things. In basic terms, a podcast is recorded spoken-word audio created for distribution. It can take lots of different forms: monologue, interview, documentary. We’ll get into examples as you work on your Listening Journal in week one.

This means there are lots of great use of audio — including some classroom assignments — that aren’t strictly podcasts. We’ll still spend time talking about things that will be relevant, including week two’s focus on recording and editing, but the general thrust of our discussion will be to move you towards distribution.

What... is this?

This is a self-paced introductory masterclass in podcasting. The goal is to introduce you to the genres and modes of podcasting, to get you to dabble in audio production, and to imagine an audio project for yourself. During scheduled iterations of the course, the LT&I team will use this space to give feedback to the developing projects; between iterations, this site will live on as a resource to be consulted.

It’s also an experiment in a new way of offering programming. Maybe it will work! Maybe it won’t. We’ll be looking for your feedback.

What do I need for this class?

Not much. A computer — or good tablet — that you can do audio editing on. A mic of some sort (but for the purposes of this class, your cell phone headphones or the headset you use for Zoom calls is just fine). Comfort with WordPress is an asset, but not required – we will get you up to speed quickly.

Your time commitment for this class can vary widely. We will suggest weekly tasks, and you can take them on – or not. Generally, this course can be completed in 1-2 hours/week, but it will reward whatever time you want to give it. You can come back to the exercises later, after the supported part of the course is over. You can post your projects publicly, or you can choose to keep everything you do in “Draft” mode. You can follow along without ever being added to the site or the Mattermost channel.

If you do complete all four tasks before the end of the scheduled period, we will issue you a certificate to show that you’ve completed this introductory course. And more importantly, we’ll be eager to partner with you on your next podcasting project adventure.

More Resources

Last year, we built out a toolkit for podcasters at TRU. (<http://podcasting.trubox.ca>) We will continue updating the resource, so please let us know what questions you have that aren't answered by it!

- In particular, we hope you'll check out our videos about collecting audio and editing podcasts (<https://podcasting.trubox.ca/the-podcasters-toolkit/>).

BC Studies has a great podcast about podcasting (<https://bcstudies.com/resources/scholarly-podcasts/the-bc-studies-podcast/>) (and Brenna isn't just saying that because she got to contribute to it).

The University of Calgary library has a great resource all about podcasting and media creation (<https://library.ucalgary.ca/guides/media-creation/podcast>).

If you're thinking in the direction of documentary-style podcasting, the CBC resources for radio documentary-making (<https://www.cbc.ca/radio/docmakers/topic/Tag/docmakers>) is a great space to explore.

And NPR built a resource for their student podcasting contest (<https://www.npr.org/2018/11/15/662070097/starting-your-podcast-a-guide-for-students>) that is actually a great, accessible introduction, perhaps suitable for sharing with your own students.

WEEKLY SCHEDULE

Week 1: Critical Listening Skills

Establishing your sound is an important first step in developing your podcast. This week, you'll spend some time listening to different podcasts and getting a sense of what you like and don't like. Then, if you choose, you can move on to the second assignment, and start to plot out what you want your podcast to sound like. You'll also get a little bit of practice editing in WordPress, which is where we'll be teaching you how to post and distribute your podcast.

Before you get started this week, you might like to read about different podcast formats (<https://castos.com/podcast-format/>), so you can think about what you want to listen to and what you want to make.

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 1 Assignments are due on November 7. You can sign up to join our live discussion of Week 1 by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

Assignment 1a: Listening Journal (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/week-1/>)

Assignment 1b: Planning Your Sound (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/1b-planning-your-sound/>)

We recommend doing Assignment 1a first. If you finished it and still have time, or if you completed 1a in a previous iteration of the course, go ahead and move on to 1b.

1a: Listening Journal

Suggested deadline: November 7

It's kind of hard to make a podcast if you don't have a good sense of what you want your work to sound like. In this first week, we're going to explore some options for scholarly podcasting and you're going to spend some time reflecting on what you like and don't like.

Your job this week is just to listen to podcasts! Try to find a range of different styles (we have some suggestions below) and look for podcasts with a scholarly angle that might match your own discipline or approach. We also want you to keep a listening journal to track your preferences.

When you're ready, make sure you're logged in to the site (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/login>).

To add a new Post

- Click the Posts menu option
- Click the Add New link underneath (or hover your cursor over the Posts menu option and click the Add new link in the fly-out menu).
- Follow the prompts to upload your content. If you're brand-new to WordPress, you can review our instructions for posting content here (<https://mcluhan-help.trubox.ca/technical-instructions/adding-editing-content/>).
- Important: make sure you choose "Journal" for the post category; this will aggregate your post alongside other participants on the Journal post page (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/category/journal/>). Here's a little more about how categories work (<https://wordpress.com/support/posts/categories/#assigning-posts-to-categories>).

Suggested Podcasts

Here are some shows favoured by folks on our team:

Interview format: Secret Feminist Agenda (<https://secretfeministagenda.com/>) was a peer-reviewed podcast (<https://www.wlupress.wlu.ca/Scholarly-Podcasting-Open-Peer-Review>) about feminist issues made by Hannah MacGregor, an assistant professor of publishing at Simon Fraser University.

Documentary format: Crackdown (<https://crackdownpod.com/>) is a SSHRC-funded podcast documenting the war on drugs from the perspective of drug user journalists.

Conversational format: Métis in Space (<http://www.metisinspace.com/>) is a podcast by Indigenous academics Molly Swain and Chelsea Vowell, critiquing Indigenous representations in popular culture (especially sci-fi and fantasy).

There are more suggestions posted over at the Amplify Podcast Network blog (https://amplifypodcastnetwork.ca/News/\(tag\)/Podcasting/Podcasting)), and we have been crowdsourcing the favourite shows of folks taking this course here (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/podcast-bucket/>). And you can, of course, download the podcatcher of your choice and spend some time exploring the options available there.

Suggested Writing Prompts

1. What format was most compelling for you to listen to?
2. What kinds of production choices – music, effects, segments – do you like, and which turn you off?
3. What conventions seem to emerge in podcasts related to your discipline or that you want to emulate?
4. What podcast couldn't you find to listen to – and do you want to make it? What might that look like?

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 1 Assignments are due on November 7. You can sign up to join our live discussion of Week 1 by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

1b: Planning Your Sound

Suggested deadline: November 7

Now that you've done some listening, it's time to think about what you want your podcast to sound like.

We'd like you to draft another post now, this time answering some questions about what you want your podcast to sound like.

Important: make sure you choose “Planning Our Sound” for the post category; this will aggregate your post alongside other participants on the Planning Our Sound post page (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/category/planning-our-sound/>) (if this link doesn't have any content yet, get writing!).

Questions to respond to in your post:

1. What podcast format are you leaning towards, and why? What do you think that format will offer for what you hope to accomplish?
2. What “segments” will your show have? Listeners often appreciate an anchoring structure. For example, on You Got This!, we open with an essay or brief monologue, then share our feature interview, and close with a “Tiny Teaching Tip.” Having an established rhythm can also help you conceptualize your show.
3. Come up with a list of adjectives to describe the tone you hope to achieve for your show. Try to find five. For example, Brenna describes the tone she aspires to for You Got This! as encouraging, friendly, conversational, easygoing, and honest.
4. What do you want your theme song to sound like? Spend some time exploring Free Music Archive (<https://freemusicarchive.org/home>) to find something that might be suitable, and share it with us.
5. Do you imagine including sound effects in your show? If so, what do you hope they will achieve? See if you can find something that fits your vibe by exploring the Wikimedia archive (https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/Category:Audio\_files), or by recording something in your world for use to listen to. Share it by linking or upload to your post!

Week 2: Recording and Editing Skills

It can be really intimidating to start recording audio if you never have before – there’s so much to know! But the truth is, capturing an editing audio is easier than you think, and you’ll be able to accomplish a lot with just a little bit of practice. This week, we’re throwing you in the deep end but we know you’ll come out swimming.

Before you get started this week, we encourage you to download Audacity (<https://www.audacityteam.org/download/>) and check out a short tutorial to get yourself oriented to the basic functions (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8ClwSNm362E>). Also, here are the changes to Audacity (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HpA138b-J9s>) after update 3.1. (If you’re using a different audio editor, feel free to scope out a good tutorial for it and share it with us instead – other good choices include Garageband, if you’re on the Mac, or paid software options like Hindenburg.)

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 2 Assignments are due on November 14. There’s no discussion this week because we’re observing Remembrance Day at TRU, but you can sign up to join our other live discussions by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

Assignment 2a: Recording and Editing Audio (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/week-2/>)

Assignment 2b: Three More Editing Tasks (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2b-three-more-editing-tasks/>)

We recommend doing Assignment 2a first. If you finished it and still have time, or if you completed 2a in a previous iteration of the course, go ahead and move on to 2b.

2a: Recording and Editing Audio

Suggested deadline: November 14

Okay, there's no time like the present – let's record some audio.

You don't need to worry too much about the outcome here. The goal is to play with the kinds of tools you will be using and just get a feel for how much you need to learn about audio editing to accomplish your goals.

Step one: Record about two minutes of audio. This can be you reading an essay or giving an impromptu monologue, or you can interview someone, or you can collect some audio you might use in a documentary-style project.

Use the best tools you have access to – but if that's your smartphone voice memo app or a Zoom headset plugged into your computer, that's a fine place to start. If you're working on your computer, you can record directly into Audacity (<https://www.audacityteam.org/>) or GarageBand (<https://www.apple.com/ca/mac/garageband/>), which you can then use to edit the file, too.

Step two: Make a production choice in an editing program. This is a wide-open task, but here are some suggestions:

- Make cuts to the audio that sound seamless.
- Raise or lower the volume of the original audio.
- Fade some piece of free-use music (<https://freemusicarchive.org/>) in or out of the recorded audio.

The goal here is just to get you in and playing with a sound editing program. When you're finished, export as an mp3 file.

Step three: We encourage everyone to transcribe their audio projects – accessibility isn't optional! We have a brief video showing how TRU folks can use Kaltura to create a transcript.

<https://api.ca.kaltura.com/a1b3977d-fee7-4894-b524-a5430689b9a0> – KALTURA

Taking the time to create audio transcripts ensures everyone can engage with your work.

If you don't have access to Kaltura at your institution, here's a tutorial on how to crib your transcript from YouTube (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XSHtuDGgDTk>).

Step four: Create a new post, this time using the category Audio Experiments. Tell us a bit about your project (no more than a paragraph or two!) and then use the Add Media function to insert your audio file. You can also paste in your transcript to your post! Make sure you use the Audio Experiment category so we can see your post aggregated here (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/category/audio-experiment/>).

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 2 Assignments are due on November 14. There's no discussion this week because we're observing Remembrance Day at TRU, but you can sign up to join our other live discussions by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost

Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

2b: Three More Editing Tasks

Suggested deadline: November 14

For these editing tasks, you can use the audio you recorded for 2a, or a different clip entirely – it's up to you. Let's keep our experiments to around two minutes, though, so that we can all listen to them.

1. Add music to your audio recording. (If you did this in task 2a, add a second music clip.) Practice playing with the levels to fade the music into and then out of your audio recording. You can read more about Fades in Audacity here (<https://manual.audacityteam.org/man/fades.html>), and you can find royalty-free music to use here (<https://freemusicarchive.org/home>).
2. Edit in a sound effect to your audio recording. You might try bleeping out some of your audio (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=erA5KhPfy5Q>) as though you are redacting content or covering a curse word or maybe you want to add an echo to your voice (<https://voiceovertip.com/how-to-add-echo-in-audacity/>).
3. Do something to “clean up” your audio – this is subjective! Play with the equalizer function to do something like reduce popped sounds (those plosive ps and ds) or sibilance, bring up a quiet bit of your audio, or play with the noise reduction (https://manual.audacityteam.org/man/noise\_reduction.html) function (Video tutorial on noise reduction (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pLfpFtstORg>)).

When you're ready, make a post and share your creations!

Important: make sure you choose “More Editing” for the post category; this will aggregate your post alongside other participants on the More Editing post page (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/category/more-editing/>) (if this link doesn't have any content yet, get editing!).

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 2 Assignments are due on November 14. There's no discussion this week because we're observing Remembrance Day at TRU, but you can sign up to join our other live discussions by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

Week 3: Distribution and Marketing

It's time, now, to put the “cast” in “podcast” by sending your work out into the world. There are lots of services you can pay for to help you distribute your work, but you have the most control by doing it yourself – and if you're a member of our TRU community, you can access all the resources you need for free by using TRUbox.

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 3 Assignments are due on November 21. You can sign up to join our live discussion of Week 3 by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

Assignment 3a: Dabbling in Distribution (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/week-3/>)

Assignment 3b: The Visual Lookfeel (and more!) (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/3b-the-visual-lookfeel-and-more/>)

We recommend doing Assignment 3a first. If you finished it and still have time, or if you completed 3a in a previous iteration of the course, go ahead and move on to 3b.

3a: Dabbling in Distribution

Suggested deadline: November 21

Oftentimes, people feel overwhelmed or nervous about the technical aspect of getting the podcast out into the world. But it's actually pretty straightforward! The goal of this week's exercise is to show you what you can do with the tools freely available here at TRU.

So we've listened to podcasts, we've made a bit of audio... now it's time to play with the distribution function in WordPress, using a plugin called Seriously Simple Podcasting. (It seriously is really simple.) We have a little video that shows you how it works:

<https://api.ca.kaltura.com/857e93bf-e824-47bf-8733-474ef9c6d7a0> – KALTURA VIDEO

Your task for this week is to take that audio experiment from last week and upload it as if it were being distributed. Our site will create an RSS feed, but we won't be submitting it to the podcatchers for pick-up.

Important: Use the existing "Test Series" for your podcast following the process in the video above, and we'll be able to see them all eventually populated in our collective RSS feed for the course (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/feed/podcast/test-series>). If you make a new series, it's not the end of the world, but it won't populate in the feed.

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 3 Assignments are due on November 21. You can sign up to join our live discussion of Week 3 by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

3b: The Visual Lookfeel (and more!)

Suggested deadline: November 21

So we promised a bit of marketing in this course, but the truth is that we're academics who couldn't sell our way out of a cardboard box. But we can talk a bit about visuals, show notes, site design, and the other components that will give your show a coherent feel.

If you're following along with our process, you'll be creating your podcast in WordPress. This gives you lots of control over how your site looks and how you will present your podcast to the world, so you'll get time to think about colours, fonts, and featured images for individual episodes. In addition, you need to select a cover image for your podcast. You can play with perhaps designing a logo or other visual signifiers of your show.

You also need to choose where you want to make your podcast available. By using the RSS feed, anyone can add the podcast to any podcatcher, but you can also submit your podcast for indexing to Apple Podcasts, Stitcher, Google Podcasts, Spotify, and others. Some folks make ethical decisions about where to share their work (<https://www.rollingstone.com/culture/culture-news/roxane-gay-removes-podcasts-spotify-misinformation-1294457/>). What's your plan?

For this assignment, make a post to answer the following questions:

1. What will your podcast cover image be? This is how your podcast will be most known visually. The image must be a square, 1400 x 1400 to 3000 x 3000 pixels in size. And you must have rights to use the image. Consider starting with a resource like Unsplash to find an image (<https://unsplash.com/>), or if you know how to use a tool like Canva you can play around in there. And this guide offers some tips on things to think about as you design (<https://99designs.ca/blog/design-other/how-to-design-a-podcast-cover-the-ultimate-guide/>).
2. What do you want your podcast's site to look like? Try to think of some colours and images that can act as inspiration for your design.
3. What will you include in your show notes each week, and how will you structure them? It's useful here to think about what your shownotes should achieve: are they informational, or about building community, or what?
4. Where do you hope to index your podcast? Take a moment to find out the process for submitting podcasts wherever you intend to submit.
5. Finally, with a thought towards some kind of "marketing," how will you plan to share your show? Does it need a social media presence, will you share with your scholarly community, or do you have another plan?

Important: make sure you choose “Visuals” for the post category; this will aggregate your post alongside other participants on the Visuals post page (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/category/visuals/>) (if this link doesn't have any content yet, get editing!).

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 3 Assignments are due on November 21. You can sign up to join our live discussion of Week 3 by clicking here (<https://tru.libcal.com/calendar/7574/podcasting>). And whenever you are accessing this course, we offer support via our Mattermost Team, which you can join by clicking here (https://matter.tru.ca/signup\_user\_complete/?id=7wo91so8h7fpjrwnc1gb45mijo).

Week 4: Scoping the Project

Suggested deadline: November 28, but the team will provide feedback on submissions received up until December 15.

In this, the final week of our course, we want to encourage you to spend some time thinking through what your podcast could be. You can use this to plan a podcast you are definitely going to make and distribute; you can also use this as a thought experiment to imagine what a podcast by you might look like.

For this last stage of the project, we'll be using the Amplify Guide to Academic Podcasting (<https://scholars.wlu.ca/books/2/>). You can read the whole guide, skim it for what interests you, or just skip straight ahead to the worksheets we will invite you to complete for this phase:

- Podcast Schedule Template (<https://amplifypodcastnetwork.ca/wp-content/uploads/2022/06/Podcast-Schedule-Template-example.pdf>)
- Podcast Budget Template (<https://amplifypodcastnetwork.ca/wp-content/uploads/2022/06/Templates-2-Podcast-Budget-Template.pdf>)
- Podcast Project Checklist (<https://amplifypodcastnetwork.ca/wp-content/uploads/2022/06/Podcast-Project-Checklist.pdf>)
- Episode Planning Worksheet (<https://amplifypodcastnetwork.ca/wp-content/uploads/2022/06/Episode-Planning-Worksheet.pdf>)

These might not all feel applicable to where you are in your project right now, and that's okay: this is your ship, we're just helping to navigate. Check them all out and complete what feels useful to you.

This is also a good time to book a meeting with us if you're ready to move forward on your project – or even if you just still have questions. We love a chat.

When you're ready, you can submit your worksheets using the form below.

In the Fall 2022 iteration of this course, Week 4 Assignments are due on November 28. # Listening Journal

1a) Listening Journal (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/12/1a-listening-journal/>)

I'm entering the TRU Podcasting Masterclass with a very specific project in mind, which will guide my explorations and my answers to weekly assignments. In particular, I'm planning to produce a series of scholarly podcasts for a Canadian heritage not-for-profit in which a retired professor of Canadian history narrates selections of their most exciting research... ## Untitled (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/07/1027/>)

This was a helpful first assignment because I probably do not often listen to podcasts (or perhaps I just don't think I do). I have listened to audiobooks, old original and revamped radio dramas. There is something about the creativity of audio without the visual that is refreshing. For radio dramas, interviews, or a program... I have been listening to podcasts since about 2005. It was a great way to pretend I was doing something instead of research and writing my dissertation. I would listen in to folk talking about literary analysis and it made me forget that I should be doing my own literary analysis. The podcasts I choose... ## Noah's Listening Journal 1a (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/07/noahs-listening-journal-1a/>)

I love to listen to podcasts and audio books when I drive. When I had a very long commute into Vancouver I went through a lot of them, when I moved to Calgary I had a very short commute so it was mostly when I was driving to other cities for work. The first podcast I remember downloading and listening from a podcast app was Brain Science with Ginger Campbell, MD. This podcast is very nerdy in the best sense. Dr Campbell finds a book on neuroscience, soaks it up, then brings the author of that book on her show for an in-depth discussion. It's very predictably... Since the start of the pandemic, I have delved deeply into online media spaces in a way that I just didn't before. I knew podcasts existed, I listened to Welcome to Nightvale, but that was pretty much it. I used YouTube as a music discovery source. Now I use YouTube as a sort of extended... Continue reading 1a. Hmm, so many choices! (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/02/hmm-so-many-choices/>)

After listening to examples of different podcast styles, two appear to be my favourites. I enjoy the interview and documentary styles of podcasts. This is probably the case because of what I hope to use podcasts for from an academic perspective. I teach social work at a college in northern Alberta. I've started to include... Continue reading Hmm, so many choices! (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/02/hmm-so-many-choices/>)

Planning my sound (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/13/planning-my-sound/>)

I'm learning toward interview/conversational because I want the podcast to be about bringing people together because I think they should meet each other. I believe it will start with an introductory essay on a theme that connects with the people I'll be inviting into the conversation. Then move into the conversation. I'd like to end... I've been reflecting a great deal this week about the podcast listening I do and when. ## Mallory's Listening Journal (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/13/mallorys-listening-journal/>)

This week I listened to my regular lineup of true crime and entertainment podcasts along with the first episode of Chameleon: Wild Boys, which was a recommendation in the Mattermost "Now Playing" chat. ## Listening and Imagining my podcast (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/10/listening-and-imagining-my-podcast/>)

The kind of podcast I envision myself having is one that is clearly finite from the outset and is a conversational style. What format was most compelling for you to listen to? I am interested in a monologue-style podcast and confirmed this by listening to the samples. I chose this style because I like to work in isolation. I'm a very particular listener: as a result of an old brain injury, I have trouble tracking multiple sounds at once. Though music tends to be my most frequent form of auditory entertainment, podcasts offer a totally different experience that I really value. I listen to entertainment and self publishing podcast mostly. I like to keep somewhat up-to-date with pop culture, but don't have the time to do that by watching, or listening, to endless programs. In a way this type of podcasting is edutainment for me. Because I consider this to be entertaining I prefer the multi-speaker... ## Ocean of sound (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2021/10/13/ocean-of-sound/>)

Podcasts are a fairly huge part of my media consumption habits, and its rare that I go a day without listening to them. A fair proportion of those are time-shifted radio programs, and I also listen to more than my share of fairly straightforward “people talking” podcasts on pretty much any subject that interests me.... (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2021/10/13/stepping-towards-first-steps/>)

I am a huge fan of recorded music. One of the main features of my living space is several shelves of vinyl records. In my mid-twenties I hosted a weekly music show on my local university’s community radio station. When I am working at home there is almost always a record or CD playing in... (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2021/10/12/radio-kaos/>)

It was inevitable that my podcast listening would be done largely at night before bed. My Grandad had a habit of tuning in to the 11pm news each night, and would use a single earbud connected to the radio so as not to disturb Nana. On nights that I would sleep over, I would get... I love stories. I love listening to stories. Together my need for good stories told well brought me to podcasts. When I looked at the podcasts in the queue on my phone, I was started to see how many of them come from public radio—both Canadian and American. My recent favorite

I used to listen to more podcasts – gardening, walking/commuting to work, dishes, cooking, but have switched lately to audiobooks. I think I just love listening to stories (when I can’t read stories) and early podcasts that I got hooked on – Radiolab, Serial, and this American Life, various CBC podcasts – were just really... I started listening to podcasts a few years ago when I had just moved to a new city and hadn’t yet secured work. ## enchanted-with-audio/)

I'm enchanted with audio. I've listened to quite a few podcasts over the years and took a look at the ones suggested for this week's class. Listening to a podcast while doing any kind of chore helps that chore suck a lot less. # Planning Our Sound

I think a shorter podcast, about 30 minutes in length, would be ideal for this project. It is academic and informational, and those listening to it are likely already listening to lectures or similar types of segments and therefore may want something familiar, but also shorter and less time-constraining. Interview style will guest speakers from... Continue reading Planning My Sound (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/18/planning-my-sound-2/>)

I'm thinking of something conversational and interview-driven. I would like to talk to people around my institute about their teaching and learning challenges and successes. For my first podcast I'm leaning toward the monologue podcast to start. It is simple and will let me get started without additional people or requirements. I already talked about some of these things in my previous post. I'm leaning towards a video podcast with a single narrator, maybe sometimes an interview/conversational aspect that is structured in such a way that the video portion could be removed for hosting on other sites like Bandcamp without much modification. I think this format... Continue reading 1b. "Sad Trombone Noises" (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/02/1b-sad-trombone-noises/>)

Hiking Tech Review, Ep. One

Today I got over-excited about a new pair of hiking poles that have just arrived, so I thought I'd record my couple-minutes audio about that. Step One I recorded the audio directly into Audacity, using my headphones with included microphone. Step Two I made some edits to the file in Audacity: Make it sound more... ## 2a. The one where Ann records something (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/13/2a-the-one-where-ann-records-something/>)

So I recorded a whole 2 plus minutes of something. I am going to be honest and say it was really scary, but I did it. The reason why it was scary is because I know my hearing is not the same as others, and I worry that there will be low key background noise... Continue reading 2a. ## 2a Noah (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/09/2a-noah/>)

That was fun to create, it took me a bit to figure out audacity, but that system helped so much. For editing of the first round, the raw audio started at 2:04 but after editing it I end up with 1:57. I didn't cut out a lot, mostly odd pauses and some of my early... Continue reading 2a Noah (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/09/2a-noah/>)

2a. In Which Ben Cheats (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/07/2a-in-which-ben-cheats/>)

I was recording these for the asynchronous virtual component of the Long Night Against Procrastination Event anyway today and thought I'd include them here. Tonally I was going for the kind of steady, almost ASMR qualities of other recorded virtual story times that public libraries tend to put on. Not exactly a natural pace or... Continue reading 2a. ## Week 2: Recording and editing audio (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/16/week-2-recording-and-editing-audio/>)

I read one of my favourite poems by Edgar Allan Poe, The Valley of Unrest. There was quite a bit of background noise, so I edited my audio clip by trying to reduce that, and by clipping my pauses at the beginning and end. Some words also seemed to spike in volume, so I tried... Continue reading Week 2: Recording and editing audio (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/16/week-2-recording-and-editing-audio/>)

Carbon (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/14/854/>)

Given that collectively, plants form more than 80% (80!) of the living world's terrestrial weight, and that, today, we humans are the largest evolutionary and geologic force on Earth, how we people think about plants matters. Many botanists, geographers, and anthropologists are paying increasing attention to how our species' history of 'replanting' the world has... ### Hiking Tech Review, Ep. 2

For this assignment, I recorded a second episode of my experimental podcast, “Hiking Tech Review,” and did some more editing. Added a middle music interlude, using a different section of the piece I had chosen for the intro and outro. Played with fades in and out. Added a sound effect, footsteps of hiking boots! Cleaned... ### Untitled (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/14/1084/>)

For assignment 2b I used the same audio clip. After finally taking out the word ‘other’ and ‘um’: I replaced the initial opening piano scale with a violin clip playing an ascending scale (from the commons.wikimedia link Brenna provided), and shifted the rest of the audio accordingly (what would we do without all the ‘how-to’... ### 2b Noah (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/09/2b-noah/>)

To be or not to be? This was a lot of fun, because I love the music bumpers in podcasts. I think I finally found a song I like for it too (and probably included way too much of it) I’ve also made it sound like I'm swearing about Brenna's blog instead of stuttering... Something... Continue reading

Too Many Sound Effects? (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/17/too-many-sound-effects/>)

Here's a sample from an interview I did a few months ago with Dr. Brenna Clark Gray. And here's my main questions for people: are there too many sound effects? I feel like I learned to put in sound effects and then went a little nuts putting them in everywhere, and I'm now reconsidering that... Continue reading Too Many Sound Effects? Fading Away (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/03/16/fading-away/>)

Unable to come up with an idea for a new script, I wrote the following lament, My brain is empty I'm out of gas I can't find a story I'll just have to pass Maybe some sleep Will do the trick After I rest I won't be so thick and reloaded my original Audio Experiment project to try the three new... Same recording as my other post where I am reading a poem, but I added some sound effects to it of birds chirping and edited the sound levels as the sound effect was way louder than my voice when I imported it.

Noah 3b (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/21/noah-3b/>)

What will your podcast cover image be? This is one of my favourite photos I've taken. I took it in Banff about two years ago, and the reflection in the river is so clear. It brings in some core things I'm wanting to focus on, one is the idea of building a path, hence the... Continue reading Noah 3b (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/21/noah-3b/>)

Given that the podcast is also hosted by an academic group from Carleton University, the image needs to be representative of the prestige of the institution. I am imaging that... On top of what I mentioned previously about my concern that my tinnitus would mean that my podcast would have fuzzy noises I would not be able to hear and thus edit out, the visual component of this is also something that is giving me anxiety. This is due to two reasons:

1. I couldn't... Continue reading 3b. Podcast Visuals For The Non-Aesthetic (<https://podcastmasterclass.trubox.ca/2022/11/20/3b-podcast-visuals-for-the-non-aesthetic/>)
